Susan Littlefield is a well-recognized leader within the association and community. As a broadcaster in her adopted home-state of Nebraska, Littlefield, is a trusted voice providing current ag news, in-depth reporting on agricultural related issues that matter to farm and non-farm audiences, and a friend to many who tune in daily for ag markets and reports.

As a 20-year NAFB member, Littlefield started reporting while in college, and has not stopped. Over her career, Susan has built strong relationships with ag leaders from around the country, helping deliver the most current and important information to Nebraska farmers and ranchers. She loves the opportunity to get out of the studio chair and head to a country fair, ride along with a local farmer or visit with consumers about agriculture to learn about their operations and share the story of agriculture.

Littlefield has served the NAFB in numerous roles, serving as committee chairs, a regional vice-president and most recently as the 2015 NAFB President. In addition to her work on air, she is active in her local community as well. A member of Common Ground, a 4-H volunteer, active in her children's school, a volunteer firefighter/EMT for the Rising City, Nebraska Fire Department and working on her family's sheep operation where she keeps her roots close to the rural America, and agriculture. Littlefield is a 1994 graduate of University of Wisconsin-River Falls.

The National Association of Farm Broadcasting is a 501(c)(6) professional organization whose mission is to lead, promote and support growth in agricultural and rural broadcasting for the benefit of our members, audience, and industry. NAFB farm broadcasters are heard on more than 1,300 stations AM, FM, TV and satellite stations coast-to-coast every day of the week.
