

Spencer Chase

Speaker bio

Additional details available upon request

Spencer Chase is an agricultural journalist who spends his time in Washington, D.C., talking to policymakers and lobbyists about the issues impacting rural America. He grew up on a diversified crop and cattle farm in South Dakota and developed a deep interest in politics at an early age. Since then, he has become a respected voice that helps farmers and ranchers understand how changes in farm policy will impact their operations.

Spencer joined Agri-Pulse Communications in 2014 after graduating with a degree in broadcast and news editorial journalism from South Dakota State University. Spencer works with the rest of the Agri-Pulse team in Washington to provide balanced and trusted coverage of the news and events on Capitol Hill, in the administration, and across the country. Spencer has filed stories from 18 states and three countries.